

Make America Great Again
Immigrants everywhere taking “Merican’s” jobs.

I went to the hospital emergency room with chest pains a little while back. A smiling but sympathetic African American woman checked me in. A Hispanic woman did an EKG to determine if I was immediate danger. A black guy that looked like a football player lifted me onto a gurney and wheeled me to semi-private service area. A middle-eastern looking dude took my temperature and blood pressure, while a Filipino guy set up a sonogram machine, and a dark-skinned nurse of undetermined origin inserted an IV tap. The first doctor I saw was an Asian woman who checked my over and issued some medication orders, then came an Indian cardiologist who eventually pronounced me salvageable and ordered my release. All of these folks spoke perfect English without a hint of an accent. On my way out, I passed two superior white guys sitting on a bench complaining loudly about immigrants. They’re right, we need to stop these immigrants. They are making America Great Again.
